

The Real World Challenge

The Real World Challenge is all about giving. Giving something back to the community, to charity or to people less fortunate than yourselves.

The concept is simple. We proactively go out and research community projects that are crying out to be done.

We then take these projects forward to create fun, challenging team building activities which promote teamwork and a sense of achievement – the fact that the work we are doing is of such value to the end recipient is the icing on the cake - what really binds people together and makes the event so successful.

Whether it is building an adventure playground for terminally ill children, redecorating a hospice, creating a sensory garden, building outdoor classrooms at a school field centre or even constructing a Cal Earth dome for street kids in Nepal the projects are all challenging, exciting, diverse and meaningful.

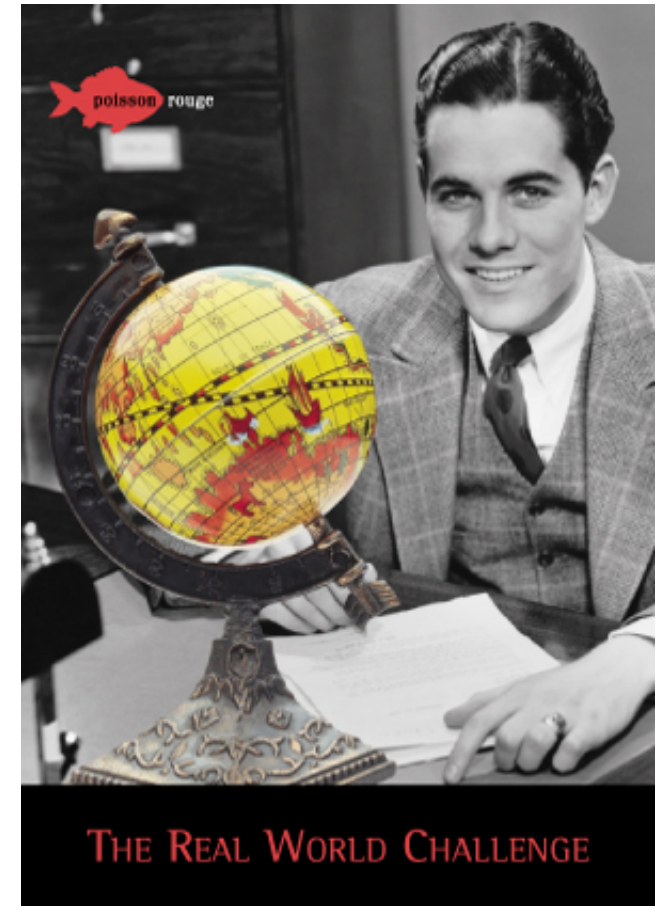

The projects we have worked on have lasted anything from a half day to 3 days for groups of between 10 to 150 people. There are very few restrictions in terms of what we can manage - it is just a case of finding the right project for your team!

It will not surprise you to hear that the work is sometimes arduous. But we will always ensure that there are less physical tasks to do and it is our ability in designing team building activities which guarantees that the projects are structured in a way that there is something for everyone.

This is an exciting, thrilling and extremely worthwhile challenge, that gives so much back. The thanks and gratitude of those helped will stay with you forever, it's something you'll be telling the grandchildren!
